

Summary

This dissertation thesis „Enforcement of maintenance collection in regard of efficiency of the functioning of law in a society“, deals with the term of the law impact efficiency in the society and its practical effect on the institute of prosecution of a maintenance collection, focused on maintenance collection for minor children. The dissertation aims to analyze the process of the enforcement of the maintenance and to examine its efficiency.

This dissertation is elaborated mainly on the basis of the Czech academic literature, the newly amended laws, the reliable printed and online sources and the germane court's interpretations.

The dissertation consists of three chapters, which are further divided into subchapters. The first chapter provides description of the institute of the maintenance from the Czech operative law point of view. The second chapter deals with the problem of the law impact efficiency itself in the society. It defines the theme itself and describes its main barriers in regard of the institute of the maintenance. The third chapter examines the problem of the efficiency of the enforcement of a maintenance collection. The conclusion of the dissertation summarizes ascertained knowledge and examines the efficiency of the enforcement of a maintenance collection.